It will be quieter in December," he said, "and likely all the men interested in irrigation in the territory will be able to go there better than at the present time. I believe that the New Mexico irrigators are opposed to any change in the name or object of the congress, or to the amalgamation of it with any of the other national bodies, as this would in a large measure divert its energies from the reclamation of the arid lands of the west."

He also stated that New Orleans was in the field for the next place of meeting, and that practically Los Angeles was the only city offering any opposition.
